☒ - a new or amended Abstract of the Disclosure

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method of trimming a lens held between two clamping pads, and the lens periphery is ground away following a controlled trajectory having a programmed terminal portion that corresponds to the desired lens shape , which includes the method comprising:

- while in a lightly clamped condition, taking first measurements of a plurality of points belonging to a face of the lens and measuring the coordinates of points forming the trace of the rim on the face;
- while in a tightly clamped condition, taking second measurements of another plurality of points of the face of the lens;
- making an approximate mathematical representation of the face of the lens for each of the two clamping conditions; and
- calculating the coordinates of the deformed outline of the lens on the face in the second clamping condition in order to correct the programmed terminal portion of the grinding trajectory.
